Fundamentally its a heat loading question. All compressors heat up the air in proportion to the amount of compression. A single stage compressor puts all the heat generated in raising the air from atmospheric pressure to output pressure into the output air whilst a two stage compressor with an intercooler between the two stages loses much of the heat gained in the first stage compression.

A Little About Spray Tip Wear. Contrary to what some believe, airless tips actually do wear out! Tips, like brakes on a car, wear out after a given amount of use, and there are a lot of variables that affect that amount of time; quality of material sprayed, the grittiness of the material, the pressure used etc.
