Engineer Vs Physicist (DEATHMATCH!!!) OK...i've seen some friendly comments on the similarities and differences between Engineering and Physics. I would like to hear from people in these fields and studying these fields to get defensive, get personal, but be serious (why not witty and funny ...but mature) about their major/profession/passion.

1. Physics to EE is easier down the road than EE to Physics. As in, an undergraduate degree in physics can land you a job or a masters/phd admission in EE, but not necessarily the other way around. 2. Physics PhD's are (almost) always "free"; in fact, you can sometimes save some money during grad school (though not often and not much).
